

Who had the best life!

We had to make a chart about three different people they are habitants, priests and nuns and last Coureursdes bois. I choose one of them which I think had the best life and they are the habitants. I found a lot of interesting things about them but out of all the rest I choose this one because well I just thought they had a really cool life, so I'm going o talk about them.

The habitants had a lot of chores and they didn't know anything about the winter I don't even think they had ever seen snow. So they knew nothing about harsh climates at first but now they know a lot and they didn't know what crops would grow or what would even happen but they learned all that and became pro at it. They had a lot of chores like plow fields, grow crops, and hunt animals for their clothing and food. If they didn't know anything at all about any of these then they wouldn't be able to live but they managed to live through harsh climates and make crops and plow fields.

The habitants had to do a lot of work but they still had a lot of things that were good like they always had a close relationship with everyone they encountered because they would help them so not a lot of people hated them. They knew a lot about the outdoors and considering they were always outside then that would be a pretty good thing to know about they also had good security because they had each other to help them when they fall or when something bad happens.

The habitant's had a lot of interesting things that they saw like animals and nature and even new creations no one has ever seen. Their clothes were pretty cool because it was made from animal furs which are really warm and cool. They also played a lot of games which hunting is one of them. I think they had to do a lot of hunting because they didn't have any shopping mall down the street. Their clothes were all made of animal fur because it kept them warm in the winter so the furs were really heavy and warm.

So I think they had a lot of chores but they still had a great life and don't forget they are not different from us they need food, shelter and all those basic needs like we do so I think they are no different than we are. I think their pretty cool I could defiantly live like them it would be so much fun don't you think so? I thought the other people were ok but the Habitants were the best so that's who I think had the best life! (I'm not saying the nuns and priests and the Coureursdes bois were boring but what if I am) !!
